

Privacy Policy

This privacy policy sets out how Hill Counselling Service uses and protects any information that you give us when you visit this website or when you contact us by other means and the lawful basis under the Data Protection Act 1998 and the General Data Protection Regulations ('GDPR' to be enacted May 25th 2018) that permits us to do so.

You may visit our website (<http://www.hillcounsellingservice.co.uk/>) freely without having to contact or use our services. We do not use cookies or Google Analytics to track your access to our website.

Children and young people under the age of 18 must have the consent of their parent, guardian or carer in order to contact us via the website or by phone.

Consent to hold your personal data

Hill Counselling Service is committed to ensuring that we protect your privacy and will seek your explicit written consent to hold personal data about you, specifically and only for the purposes of providing counselling to you. We may also analyse data you provide us with for the purposes of providing the best possible service to you.

If you make contact via this website or by phone you will be asked to provide certain information by which you can be identified (see below).

You can be assured that all this information is held securely and will only be used in accordance with data protection principles and BACP policies.

The basis on which we hold or share information about you is outlined below and also the limits around confidentiality.

You have the right of access to information we hold about you and to amend or ask for deletion of information that may not be accurate or correct. Please contact us if you wish to view the data we hold about you. Hill Counselling Service will not hold your data for longer than is deemed necessary for the purposes of counselling and following best practice and legal guidance. Please refer to our 'Retention Policy' as stated in our 'Confidentiality Policy'.

By visiting our website you are agreeing to the contents of this Privacy Notice.

For the purpose of the Data Protection Act 1998 and the GDPR, the data controller is Sarah Hill of 96 Rhode Lane, Bridgwater, Somerset, TA6 6HY, info@hillcounsellingservice.co.uk.

The types of personal data we collect and use

Whether or not you become a client of our counselling service we'll use your personal data for the purposes of initiating counselling for you. We collect the majority of this information during first contact and consultation. We will advise you if any of this data is optional.

At first contact

We will collect the following information in order to establish if we can provide you with counselling:

- Your name
- Your age (our children and young people's service start from 11 years)
- Contact information including your email address and/or phone number

At The Consultation

- Your name
- Date of birth
- Contact information including your email address
- Home address
- Next of kin or emergency contact
- Other information relevant to you engaging in counselling with us, e.g. the name of your medical practice
- Information about any disability or communication difficulty you may have
- A brief description of what is bringing you for counselling now
- At the consultation you (or your parent/guardian if under 18) will be asked to sign our Informed Consent Form to give us permission to process your data and also information about your healthcare professionals and emergency contact details
- Further anonymised clinical information via Clinical Outcomes in Routine Evaluation ('CORE'). This is a measurement outcome tool to track wellbeing progression at various points throughout your counselling journey, you have the right to decline partaking in this at any time

During counselling

- Counselling notes are not shared with anyone unless we are legally required to do so or the client specifically requests we share them with another third party, which we have the right to refuse to do
- You have the right to view these notes and you would be advised of any request to share your notes
- These notes are the property of Hill Counselling Service and not the client

What we do with the information we gather

We collect this information to understand your clinical and other needs from counselling and provide you with a better service, and in particular for the following reasons:

- Internal record keeping
- Professional supervision

The lawful basis and purpose of holding this data is to ensure we can meet the terms for providing a contract for counselling with you.

We will also use your personal data to meet any legal obligations placed upon us – for instance when you exercise your rights to see what data we hold under data protection law or in order to meet any legal compliance placed on us; or occasions where we may be obliged to disclose information related to safeguarding children, young people and adults at risk.

Your written consent will be sought at consultation for the need to meet possible disclosure to other bodies.

Where we store your personal data

The data that we collect from you is not transferred outside the European Economic Area (“EEA”).

Hill Counselling Service will take all steps reasonably necessary to ensure that your data is treated securely and in accordance with this privacy notice and our data protection and confidentiality policies.

All information you provide to us is stored securely.

Unfortunately, the transmission of information via the internet cannot be completely secure. We have in place security measures to protect your personal data, but we cannot guarantee the security of your data transmitted to our site, particularly by email; any transmission is at your own risk. Once we have received your information, we will use our own policies and procedures as far as is reasonably possible to prevent unauthorised access.

Security

Hill Counselling Service is committed to making sure your information is secure. We have in place appropriate policies and procedures to prevent unauthorised access or disclosure.

Controlling your personal information

We do not share your personal information with anyone else unless in pursuit of counselling on your behalf and only then if we have your permission to do so. In exceptional circumstances we may be required by law and our ethical responsibilities to break our confidentiality with you.

We would discuss this with you first wherever possible but if you do not give consent we may still have to disclose information. This relates to situations where you may be at risk of harm, causing harm to others, the safeguarding of children, young people and adults at risk and acts of terrorism where we are under legal obligations.

Access to information

You have the right of access to the personal information which we hold about you under the Data Protection Act 1998 and the GDPR and also the right of access to your client notes. You can contact us or email us if you wish to examine what we hold and believe that any information we are holding on you is incorrect or incomplete. Steps will be taken to correct any incorrect information that we hold.

There is no charge to access this information and it will be provided to you within one month.

You have the right to complain to the Information Commissioners' Office in connection with enforcement and compliance with data protection law at <http://www.ico.org.uk/>.

Contact us

Questions, comments and requests regarding this privacy notice, policies and procedures around privacy and confidentiality are welcomed and should be addressed to us by email to info@hillcounsellingservice.co.uk or by writing to us at our address.
